We capture the complete picture

At Audax, we're in the business of transparency; of capturing the complete picture. The visuals, sounds and the beginnings and ends of stories that often don't get seen, heard or told by an individual.

In safeguarding against potential violence and minimising the impact of aggression, we uphold integrity by providing comprehensive evidence. This not only protects against false allegations but also offers individuals, businesses and organisations confidence — ensuring their complete security.

Our mission at Audax is to empower people to feel safer at their places of work. Since 2005, we've been doing just that, from Plymouth, UK. As the pioneers in body-worn video technology, our safety solutions have protected thousands of individuals and hundreds of organisations around the world. Our customers include numerous UK councils, emergency service workers, retailers, security guard companies and police forces around the world.

Fulfilling our customer's unique and varying challenges is our primary motivation, ensuring everyone who partners with Audax experiences the unparalleled quality we're associated with.

Trust us to get the complete picture

Audax[®] uses contract manufacturers to build our component subassemblies. In the case of the camera docking stations, all manufacturing for these items takes place in the UK, using tools and moulds owned by us.

Parts assembly and unit build is done by us at our site in Plymouth where we also perform all final assembly, testing and quality control functions for our products. Audax are approved members of Made in Britain, the register of British Manufacturers.

We're also proud to be the first Security business to adopt the Good Business Charter. Providing award winning products is one thing, but having recognition for how we conduct ourselves as a business is of particular importance to Audax[®].
